Educational Philosophy

My educational philosophy centers around my goal to provide a safe, secure, and stable environment where each child is loved beyond measure, respected for individual differences, and empowered to reach their goals.

I strive to establish secure, trusting relationships with each student, getting to know them as individuals and respecting the variety of learners, circumstances, and varying educational needs present in my classroom. I believe education should provide a strong foundation for life, and instill a lifelong love of learning rooted in inquiry and critical thinking. My goal is to empower each student to realize that they are capable and responsible for their progress and achievements.

As an educator, I feel extremely blessed to be able to work in a place that allows students, and teachers, to build and deepen their personal relationships with God. My spiritual beliefs help me face the many challenges of teaching with more grace, patience, forgiveness, and sheer gratitude for these precious gifts I have been entrusted to care for.
