My Teaching Philosophy
Saint Anastasia School
2014-2015

After 34 years of teaching kindergarten and 2 years of first grade, I have seen new trends tried and never return. I have found that each child is as unique, as their learning styles and strengths.

The love of learning is instilled in each child through powerful hand on teaching. This is why I introduce activities and projects that are fun, interesting, and meaningful to my kindergarten students. We explore by using all modalities, to build a better understanding of the activity being taught.

The love of learning is found in the many Religious and Language Arts programs. Through Religion, Art, Music, Spanish, Physical Education, Literature programs help each student find something special beside the basic academics that interest them.

The love of encouraging students to think outside the box, through my teachings, I show each child how to promote creativity, to encourage higher level thinking skills, and to try an activity to build confidants in their writing and learning.

Kindergarten needs to be a Journey, not a Race.

Through my teaching, I want my students to be active learners, disciplined, and creative thinkers. I want each child to LOVE coming to school, to LOVE learning, to LOVE exploring new ideas, to LOVE making good choices, to LOVE helping others, and show their LOVE Of GOD and Family and understand his teachings.
